from volcanological and sedimentological perspectives. The idea for this book came into being between 1981 and 1982 when J. V. W. came to Monash University to take up a Monash Postdoctoral Fellowship. During this period a short course on well founded interpretations. For that reason we facies analysis in modern and ancient successions cover not only concepts about processes, and the was put together, integrating J. V. W. 's extensive nature of the products, but also methods and volcanological experience in numerous modern approaches that may be useful in analysing both modern and ancient successions. Most importantly, volcanic terrains with R. A. F. C. 's extensive sedimentological and volcanological experience in we treat the diversity of products in volcanic older volcanic and associated sedimentary successions as facies, and we use the method of facies analysis in the Palaeozoic and Precambrian of analysis and interpretation as a means of construct Australia. The enthusiastic response from the participants to the first short course, taught in May 1982, and to subsequent annual re-runs, encouraged us to develop the short course notes into this book. The only publication which overlaps with this one book.
