The Village blacksmith: or, Piety and usefulness exemplified, in a memoir of the life of Samuel Hick, late of Micklefield, Yorkshire. -- James Everett

UIEDICTOKY ADDEESS. WuEN, in 1830, the first edition of the Village Blacksmith was published, the writers hopes were so moderate as to prevent the risk of a largo edition, and he was the more surprised to find a quick demand for a second. The last edition was put to press in 1861, and another was called for at the close of 1862, completing as sold, the Twenty-sixth Thousand. Being importuned to publish another edition of 2,000 copies, advanced age interposed its interdict the writer closely verging on his seventy-ninth year when it was flatteringly, though kindly and sincerely said, You may gracefully allude to your age, to the many years the work has been before the public, the undiminished interest felt in it, as proved by increased demand, and your wish to leave to the public, as a legacy, an improved edition from your ovm, and it may be, though hoped not your last hand, of a work that has met with such acceptance, and which has been so useful to the Christian Churc Ti. Acquiescence was the result. The mind, which is as apt to look back in old age, as it is to look forward in youth, was carried to the period of the publication of the first edition, at which time the writer accompanied Dr. A dam Clarke on a visit to I reland. They spent some days at Portstuart, where they were entertained at the house of John Cromie, Esq.
